

To summarise

- State updates are queued and computed lazily during render
- React bails out of render if the state doesn't change
- Updates are batched inside event handlers
- State is actually a reducer
- State updates should be considered asynchronous, even though they mostly happen inside the same event loop

Thank you!

